Dear Bev Hus[illegible],

We thank you for your letter of the 30th and the good wishes, which we also extend to you.

I write in haste to caution you that most of what you'll read, including on the computer net, is by those who know little about the assassination and imagine much.

To a large degree what is believed today comes from books that are not factual.

Often they are enlarged upon.

Much if not most is fiction.

Which may be better for you. I do not know.

My suggestion is that you not assume aby of it is fact.

A novelist is not bound by fact. I'm merely trying to inform you.

Best wishes,

Harold Weisberg
